

- It was correlated with the boiling heat transfer coefficient, nucleation site density, coefficient of surface wettability, coefficient of surface roughness, and the contact angle. The heat transfer coefficient was correlated with the contact angle. The heat transfer coefficient was correlated with the contact angle.
- CHF exhibited a strong dependence on the surface roughness and the contact angle. The CHF was correlated with the surface roughness and the contact angle. The CHF was correlated with the surface roughness and the contact angle.

References

- [1] M. Jakob, Heat Transfer by Boiling, McGraw-Hill, New York, 1959.
- [2] W.M. Rohsenow, Boiling of Liquids and Vaporization, McGraw-Hill, New York, 1950.

Fig. 13. Trend of Eq. (26) at different contact angles of 10° , 30° , 50° , and 70° and comparison with the measured data at the contact angle of 64.5° .